

LITERARY NOTES.

Senor Castelar is occupying in Spain a field which Mrs. Strickland has made her own in England. He is writing a series of sketches of British Queens for the Spanish journal El Dia, and is at present at work upon the life of Mary Stuart.

Mr. G. W. Cable has wisely revised "The Grandissimes," and has banished much of its puzzling and unlovely dialect. The new edition thus corrected and improved is coming from the press of Scribner. The author is now in the city, presumably reading the proofs of his forthcoming novel, "Dr. Sevier."

Charles Reade is preparing for Harper's a series of "Bible Characters," believing that a clever novelist has a special capacity for showing the men and women of the Bible in their habits as they lived.

Mr. Mozoondar, the East Indian teacher of the Bramo-Sonaj, now visiting Boston, is about to publish a book entitled "The Oriental Christ." It is the record of his conversion to Christianity, and is described by a correspondent of The Christian Union as fascinating and strikingly realistic.

Mr. Mr. Weston has written a short story called "Uncle Jack" for the Christmas number of The London Graphic. The author of "Vice-Versa" has prepared for the same number a story with the quaint title of "A Toy Tragedy."

It was his poem of "The Grandmother" that Mr. Tennyson read aloud the other day to his royal audience in the cabin of the "Pembroke Castle."

Mr. Austin Dobson's edition of "The Vicar of Wakefield" will be brought out in December.

The Scriveners purpose to publish soon a small volume entitled "Golden Thoughts from the Spiritual Guide of Miguel Molinos, the Quietist." The "Spiritual Guide" was translated and published in 1699, and since that time, it is believed, no issue in English has been published. For this promised volume Mr. J. Henry Shorthouse has written a preface, and a life of Molinos by Professor Lindsay of the Free Church College is appended. The little book will be a fitting companion for Mr. Bigelow's agreeable sketch of "Molinos the Quietist."

"Turgeneff," said Ernest Renan over the body of the Russian novelist, "had received that mystic degree which pre-eminently makes human vocation a noble gift; he was essentially impersonal. His conscience was not that of an individual more or less gifted by nature; it was in a certain way the conscience of a people. Before he was born he had been living for thousands of years; infinite trains of dreams were concentrated deep in his heart. Never has a man been thus the incarnation of a whole race. A world lived in him, and spoke through his mouth; generations of ancestors, lost without uttering a word in the sleep of centuries, were endowed by him with life and language. The silent genius of collective masses is the source of everything grand. But the multitude has no voice. It knows but to feel and to shudder. Who will tell of its sufferings, denied by those whose interest it is to belittle them; its secret aspirations, which overthrow the sanctimonious optimism of the satisfied? A great man, if at the same time he has heart and genius."

The appearance of a new novel by Gustav Freytag, always a literary event in Germany, is announced for the Christmas holidays.

The latest collection of novelties by Paul Heyse, entitled "In der Freudenwelt," contains three tales, each of which is devoted to the friendship between two men entirely different in character and disposition. As studies in psychological problems they rank with the author's previous efforts in that direction, and like all his writings are distinguished by grace of style and purity of diction.

The first number of Mr. William Swinton's Story-Teller shows skillful editorship. Only two of the several complete tales are original with this publication, but the selections are made with unusual taste and judgment. The plan of republishing the strongest and most characteristic of short stories, old and new, is an excellent one, and should insure the interest of all who have a liking for the little gems of fiction. The two original stories of the number—by the Rev. Edward Everett Hale and by Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford—are representative in the pleasantest sense of those accomplished writers.

A new novel by Rudolph Lindau, entitled Der Gast, is spoken of by a French correspondent as resembling in a marked manner the work of Bret Harte. The scene is laid in California, and the characters are chiefly miners of various nationalities, Scotch, German, Greek and Russian.
